LOOKING FOR THORN HERE,

ACTING INSPECTOR O'BRIEN THINKS HE IS IN THE CITY.

EVIDENCE THAT GULDENSUPPE WAS MURDERED IN WOODSIDE, LONG ISLAND-A GENERAL

ALARM FOR THORN SENT OUT.

The efforts of the Detective Bureau toward the elucidation of the mystery surrounding the murder of William Guldensuppe were mainly directed yesterday to the tracing of the man Martin Thorn, who is suspected of being implicated in the murder. Hitherto it has been believed that Thorn had made his way to Montreal and from that port had taken a steamer for Germany. But last night Acting Inspector G'Brien expressed the conviction that the man was still hiding in this city. This belief is founded upon the result of investigations made by detectives yesterday at Woodside, Long Island, what is still more startling, it is asserted that they learned enough while at Woodside to lead to the positive assurance that the murder was actually committed at that place.

It was reported at Police Headquarters last right that the detectives had ascertained that for some time prior to the murder of Guldensuppe the latter and Mrs. Nack, who is now in custody, were in negotiation with a real estate dealer of the name of Bualo for the renting of a house just the other side of Woodside, Long Island, in Newtown. Several visits were paid to this house by the man and woman, and it is now believed that Thorn was secreted in the house to await the coming of Mrs. Nack and Guldensuppe at the time Mrs. Nack telephoned Guldensuppe about making a trip to Woodside, and that after he got there he was murdered and his body was cut up and distributed about in various places where the pieces were found. The fact of the buggy, with the man and the oman and the bundle which was seen leaving Newtown on Saturday, June 26, the day the first portion of the body was found floating in the river at East Eleventh-st., strengthens the theory. It is believed that when the buggy with its ghastly bundle was on the ferry-boat on its way to this city, the grewsome bundle was dropped overboard, and was a short time afterward picked up by the two little boys who were swimming in the river near the ferry slip.

AN IMPORTANT LETTER

Moreover, the detectives brought back with them a letter of the gravest importance. It was addressed to Mr. Bualo, and was mailed at postoffice Station E, in West Thirty-second-st., this city, on July 2. The letter read as follows:

New-York, July 2, 1897. Mr. Bualo: On account of sickness in my family, I will not move into the house before another week or ten days. Respectfully,

The handwriting in the letter was compared with the handwriting of the telegram which Mrs. Nack said she received from Guldensuppe, which requested her to go to the bath and see the superintendent. The handwritings were identical, which establishes to the minds of the detectives and Acting Inspector O'Brien that the letter was written by Thorn, as was the telegram, and that Thorn is still in the city, and wrote the letter which was mailed on Friday at Station E, and which was received by Mr. Bualo yesterday morning.

Acting Inspector O'Brien considered the letter to be of the greatest importance, and he was of the impression that he would have Thorn in custody before the night was out.

The handwriting of the letter sent to the real estate dealer has been compared with a letter written to Mrs. Nack by Thorn, and have been found to be similar, enough so in fact to make it apparent that the same person wrote both

CRIES OF "MURDER" HEARD IN WOODSIDE.

Acting Inspector O'Brien told late last night of certain discoveries made by Detectives Barrett and Boyle, who have been making the investigation in Woodside. They found that Martin Rittenger and his wife occupy a house in Second-st. there, which is separated only by a vacant lot from the house which it is though Mrs. Nack was making arrangements to occupy The detectives were told by Bittenger that at 2 o'clock Saturday morning. June 26, the day on which the first portion of the body was found, he and his wife were aroused by the barking of dogs. Bittenger says he got up and went down to his back stoop. He had just reached there when he heard a cry of "Murder!" It was a loud cry, and it came from the direction of the house beyond the vacant lot. Bittenger called to his wife, and she hurried out just in time to hear some one cry "Help!"

Just about this same time Mary Ruppert, who occupies the house next the Bittengers, also heard the cry of "Help!"

The detectives visited the house from which the cries are thought to have come, and after a thorough investigation they arrived at the conclusion that the murder had been committed there. They believe the man was killed in a bathroom, and from the tub the blood was allowed to run into a mud gutter at the front of the building. In this gutter there was evidence and taken by the detectives to the Central Office in this city. It will be analyzed to determine whether or not there is blood in it.

THOUGHT HE SAW THORN

The detectives also found a lamp-lighter named Thomas Walley, who gave a perfect description of Thorn. He said he had seen such a man leavthe house where it is thought the murder was committed. Whether it was Thursday or Friday he had seen the man he could not be certain, but he thought it was Friday. From this the detectives came to the conclusion that Thorn was in the house on that Friday before the murder was Acting Inspector O'Brien yesterday sent our a general alarm for Thorn. He said that he had ascertained that Thorn, or Torzewski, was a rather expert pinocle player, and spent much of his time in East Side saloons playing the game with friends. On Tuesday last, the Acting Inspector says, Thorn was in one of these saloons, and while playing a game of pinocle, remarked, "Well, to-morrow by this time I will be on the

WOULD TRY TO MISLEAD.

But it is said that such a man as Thorn must be if he killed Guldensuppe would not deliberately tell anybody of his intentions, or where he was going after he had committed such a deed as this murder. Therefore, when he remarked in the saloon of a man named Frey, in East Thirly-fourth-st, that "by this time to-morrow I'll be on the ocean," his motive was to mislead, and his object was to divert attention from himself in this city and make the police believe that he was really on his way to Germany, when in reality he was in hiding in this city.

Early yesterday evening Acting Inspector O'Brien called all the newspaper men into his private office at Police Headquarters and gave out a long statement concerning the alleged murder of Guldensuppe. To begin with, he said that, after several conferences with Assistant District-Attorney Mitchell, both had come to the conclusion that there was no doubt that the remains of the body found in different sections of the city were those of Guldensuppe, and that the publication of the developments in the daily press would greatly aid them in the arrest of Thorn, alias Torzewski. Captain O'Brien thanked the newspaper men, and said they had

"I would say," he continued, "that Assistant District-Attorney Mitchell has been in communication with the State Department at Washington, and on the advice of that Department cable dispatches have been sent to Europe this afternoon for the authorities to intercept the arrival of passengers on the steamers City of Paris, at Southampton, and the Majestic, at Liverpool, in order to cause the arrest of Thorn, if by any chance he should have sailed."

The Acting Inspector denied that he had subjected Mrs. Nack to the police "thirty-third degree" and declared that he was opposed to such methods of getting admissions from prisoners. He declared that the woman had been treated with the utmost kindness and that the only time the exhibits in the mystery had been shown to her it was with her consent and after a warning. chance he should have sailed."

AN ADMISSION FROM THE WOMAN.

The Acting Inspector went on to tell an interesting story, which he said went to show that the murder of Guldensuppe was prearranged, and that Mrs. Nack and Thorn were the murderers. He said that two days ago he had at derers. He said that two days ago he had at his effice August Struning, of No. 465 Ninthave, the undertaker from whom the surrey had been hired on last Saturday. After Mr. Struning had positively identified Mrs. Nack as the person who had secured the surrey, according to the Acting Inspector, she admitted that Martin Thorn was the man whom she had sent to the undertaking establishment for the horse and surrey. She also acknowledged in the presence of Acting Inspector O'Brien. Mr. Struning and Detectives Price and Donohue, that she had been in the surrey with Thorn on Saturday, and was with him from the time it was returned. The Acting Inspector asked her at the time, so he said, where she got into the carriage after it had been hired from the undertakers, but she refused to tell him, and said that she had spent the afternoon and evening driving about Central Park.

Park.
According to Acting Inspector O'Brien, she said that she loved Thorn, and if necessary would die for him. She also acknowledged that Thorn had told her that if he ever met Guldensuppe he would kill him, and that Guldensuppe had told her the same thing concerning Thorn.

THE NOTE AND THE VALISE. Captain O'Brien further asserted that Mrs Nack had admitted to him that it was Martin Thorn who had sent the note to her by the two boys, and to whom she had delivered the valise and answered the note with another which she wrote to him. She said that she had forgotten the contents of the notes.

Acting Inspector O'Brien said that his detec-Acting Inspector O'Brien said that his detectives had learned that Thorn was a frequenter of the saloon of a man named Frey, near the Thirty-fourth-st. ferry, in Thirty-fourth-st. He said that he had had talks with Henry Federer, of No. 558 First-ave.; Edward Stecht, the bartender, and Edward Gordon, of No. 515 Third-ave. They all knew Thorn, and knew him by the name of "The barber." He was not known as anything else at the saloon. He was also known to be an exceptionally good pinochie player, seldom losing a game.

According to a statement made by Federer. "the barber" called at the saloon at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of Tuesday, after the murder was committed, and said that he had a woman with him on the outside and that they were going across to Long Island City to look for a house on a certain street.

He stayed in the scloon a short time, and then went away. He retugned in about an hour, and the woman was with him. They soon left the tives had learned that Thorn was a frequenter

He stayed in the scloon a short time, and then went away. He returned in about an hour, and the woman was with him. They soon left the saloon together and went in the direction of the ferry. Thorn returned to the saloon again at about 6:45 o'clock, and Federer met him there. The woman was not with him. He said to Federer that he (Thorn) had just time to play one game of pinochle. He said that he had to meet a woman at 8 o'clock at Seventh-ave, on the West Side.

The same of life and death!" said Thorn to Federer, according to the latter's statement. "To whom is it death?" Federer remarked to Thorn.

Thorn.
"To me," answered Thorn.
Acting Inspector O'Brien said that all three of the men-Federer, Stecht and Gordon-identified Mrs. Nack at Headquarters as the woman who was in company with Thorn on that after-who was in company with Thorn on that afternoon.

Acting Inspector O'Brien said that he had asked Mrs. Nack whether she and Thorn had spoken about the murder, and she said that Thorn had spoken to her something about a body being boiled. The Acting Inspector said that Mrs. Nack also acknowledged having held a conversation with Guldensuppe over a telephone from a drug store, and while Guldensuppe was at the baths. She admitted having spoken to him about going to Woodside. She did not want the people in the drug store to know what the conversation was about, presumably because it might be brought up against her at some future time, but made an engagement to meet him. The conversation was overheard in the drug store by one of the clerks.

"In my opinion," remarked Acting Inspector O'Brien, "this is when Guldensuppe was lured over to Woodside and there murdered. The plan to murder him was concocted here, in this city, but the murder really took place in the house in Woodside."

IDENTIFIED BY HIS NEPHEW.

August Petersen, a nephew of William Guldensuppe, came from Philadelphia yesterday morning and positively identified the mutilated body at the Morgue as that of his uncle.

Both men are pushcart pedlers, and the shooting is the outcome of jealously. Cardarelli's wife seems to have bestowed some of her smiles on Buoncoa, much to the former's rage, and he determined to punish the other man. Yesterday morning Cardarelli lay in wait for Buoncoa and stopped him at Bleecker-st, and Eighth-ave.

Buoncoa ordered the other man to take his hand off the pushcart. There was a profane discussion, which led to a fist fight. Buoncoa was getting the best of the fistic encounter, when suddenly Cardarelli pulled back and drew a revolver from his pocket. He thrust it into Buoncon's face before any one could stop him and fired. The bullet found lodgment in the back of the head.

Buoncoa reeled and fell to the ground, face down, with the blood oozing from his wound. Then Cardarelli put his revolver against Buoncoa's head and pulled the trigger. Somehow, the weapon talled to discharge the second builet, and Buoncoa's life was temporarily spared. By this time the crowd had ralited its senses and made a dash at Cardarelli, who at once took to his heels, and, throwing the revolver into a convenient basement, fled along the street, ahead of the howling mob, which was led by Martin Pollock, of No. 85 Eighthave., and thirteen-year-old William Lewis, of No. 3 Bank-st. The chase lasted for two blocks, and Cardarelli was finally caught by Pollcemen Grindley and Gerighty, of the Charles-st. station.

Buoncoa, unable to make any statement, was removed to St. Vincent's Hospital, and Cardarelli was taken to Jefferson Market Court and held without bail.

A serious accident occurred yesterday morning at the home of J. J. Dykes, No. 125 Oak-st., to Everett Bare, a five-year-old son of J. E. Bare, a well-known local resident. The little fellow was playing in the yard, and approached too close to a horse belonging to Mr. Dykes, which was standing tied. The animal kicked at the little fellow, striking him on the forenead and making him unconscious. The boy was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, where it was learned that he had sustained a compound fracture of the skull. Hardly had the report of the accident been made at the police station than word was received that a six-year-old boy. James Duff, white walking across Riverdale-sve, near Herriot-st., was run down and probably fatally injured by a cyclist, who had escaped. The how was taken to his home at No. 81 Jefferson-st., and later to St. Joseph's Hospital. He is also suffering from a compound fracture of the skull, and it is not thought that he will live.

The severe storm of Friday afternoon proved disastrous to the women in charge of the lawn party given for the benefit of St. Joseph's Hospital. Although they worked bravely to protect the articles which were exposed for sale on the booths, they were unable to get all of them under shelter, and there was consequently a heavy loss. Despite this, the management expects to reap a neat sum from the proceeds

THE ROBBERY AT R. T. WILSON'S. NO CLEW TO THE THIEVES YET SECURED

BY THE POLICE. The police believe that the persons who stole $2.500 worth of jewelry from the house of R. T. Wilson No. 511 Fifth-ave., last Wednesday, were familian with the interior arrangements of the house. It is possible that the thief is a former servant of the family. As yet the criminal has not been ap-prehended. When the jewels were stolen the house was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Wilson and Robert Goelet, jr. The robbery was probably committed about dinner-time. The three remained in the library some time after dinner, and at length Mr.

Goelet went to his room. He had left his watch and $150 in money on his dressing table, and both and $150 in money on his dressing table, and both were missing. Thinking that a servant had misplaced them. Mr. Goelet said nothing about the matter until the next day, when Mr. Wilson reported that some of his jewelry had been stolen. Among the things stolen were a diamond double horseshee, a gold watch, a pearl pin jewelled with diamonds, which was one of the zifts to the ushers at the Vanderbilt-Marlborough wedding; a pair of cuff-buttons valued at $1,500, and a set of pearl study valued at $500.

The police were at once informed of the theft and began an investigation. They found that the thief had entered at the basement gate. This gate cas be opened from the outside only by somebody familiar with the mechanism. This is the only clew the police have to work upon. The servants were questioned, but they all gave satisfactory answers, and the jewels were not to be found at the pawnshops.

The children had not been on the pier long, and Rosie was just putting the finishing touches to a sand castle, when they were surprised by a boy, known only as "Matt," who, the children say, is a new arrival in the neighborhood. According to Matilda, the boy pushed Rosle, and in trying to regain her footing she slid down the sandheap and through a hole in the pier into the water. The girl, at any rate, reached the Thompson home in a hysterical state, and told Mrs. Thompson that her child was drowned. The mother ran to the pier, wringing her hands and pleading "For God's sake, save my baby!" but no sign of the child could be seen. She was led away by friends and the river was dragged, the chili's body being at lost recovered.

a largely increased consumption of fruit as com-pared with that of the previous week, and there as an active demand for supplies for the Fourth of July trade from both local and out-of-town deal-ers. The receipts and offerings at public auction were so heavy, however, that prices declined, and were generally weak. There were 45,000 packages of oranges and lemons disposed of at a single sale, which was the largest on record. At the several auction sales in the week the unusual quantity at this season of about 50,000 boxes of oranges, mostly from 50 to 75 cents a box lower than those realized in the previous week. Aside from the fact that the quantity offered was exceptionally large, prices were seriously affected by remarkably large receipts of California and other small fruits. About 150,000 boxes of lemons were sold. This is the largest quantity hitherto disposed of in a single week, and ts sale caused a decline of from 75 cents to $1 a ox. The offerings of lemons will be much smaller its sale caused a decline of from to cents to at a box. The offerings of lemons will be much smaller this week, and should the weather continue warm a sharp upward reaction of prices is anticipated. There were fifty-eight carloads of California fruit sold last week, against carloads of California fruit sold last week, against thirty carloads in the previous week, making a total number of 174 carloads to date, against only lob carloads during the corresponding part of last year. There was a good demand for peaches, which commanded from 60 cents to $1.5 a box for desirable stock. Receipts of pluma were exceptionally heavy, and prices declined about 60 per cent. Clymans selling for from 60 to 75 cents a box and choice Tragedies from $1.25 to $1.75 a box. Apricots were in limited supply, and sold at advanced prices, ranging from $1.30 to $1.50 a box. Receipts of cherries were large and prices low, heavy supplies having come in from Southern and Eastern sources. A few California Bartlett pears were received, but they were generally small, although a few choice ones were sold for $5 a box. Florida Le Conte pears were in oversupply, and sold for from $1 to $2 a barrel, as compared with $2.50 to $1.50 in the previous week. Waterme.ons were in increased demand and prices somewhat firmer, while muskmelons were in excessive supply, and commanded practically only nominal prices. Pincapples and bananas were plentiful, while the supplies of berries of various kinds was considerably diminished.

FICIENT ACCOMMODATIONS.

Commissioner of Patents Butterworth is about to issue a new set of rules for the Patent Office, which will be substantially the same rules which were the outgrowth of a half-century's experience and which were replaced by the rules promulgated by the last Commissioner toward the close of his term. The new departure will consist of rules designed to afford inventors better protection against the dishonesty and incompetency of a certain class of so-called patent attorneys. Many of these are not only not lawyers, but know little or nothing of Patent Office procedure. On account of the lack of knowledge and the unskilfulness with which these people draw papers and prosecute claims, the patents which they do obtain are, in many cases, worthless, and in other cases nearly so.

The average inventor does not understand that, though he may have a valuable invention and get a patent on it, yet, if his patent is not sufficiently broad, his invention may be virtually lost to him. This often happens. It seems hard, but there is no way to prevent it. It is the same with respect to law. People who are sompelled to go into court often lose their rights through the ignorance, incompetency or mistakes of their counsel. But courts must be governed by rules, and, if people lose their rights through intrusting them to those ignorant of these rules, they have only themselves to blame.

A more liberal policy is being pursued toward inventors. It has been a recent practice to resolve all doubts in favor of the inventor.

"I do not know why it is," said Mr. Julian C.

"I'd do not know why it is," said Mr. Julian C.

Mr. Dowell is thoroughly competent to speak on Mr. Dowell is thoroughly competent to speak on such matters and his opinion will have much weight. He stands high in the profession, was for many years an examiner in the Patent Office, has had a great many years' experience as a Patent Solicitor and in trying cases before the courts. He was the partner of the present Commissioner, Mr. Butterworth, until the latter took charge of the Patent Office last April.

A visit to the Patent Office last April.

A visit to the Patent Office shows that the condition of crowding there borders on the disgraceful. Mr. Butterworth says that the cells in the St. Petersburg prisons are actually more commodious than some of the rooms which Patent Office employes are compelled to work in. Examiners are huddled together—so many in a room that a conference cannot be held with one without disturbing all the rest. Documents are piled up in the halls, and in most rooms papers are piled up in desks so as to materially retard work. All this notwithstanding the fact that there are $3,000,000 in the Treasury that the inventors of the country have paid in. The business of the office has increased 7 per cent in a year; a great increase. The office will turn into the Treasury this year $100,000 more than last year, and $50,000 above expenditures.

It is believed that Mr. Butterworth will keep up the agitation until relief is granted. No one knows better than he the needs of the Patent Office, and Congress has confidence in him.

FOR LIBERAL SUNDAY LAWS.

The New-York State Club, National Democratic party, of the XXXIId Assembly District, with headquarters at No. 1,849 Third-ave., held an Independence Day celebration in the clubrooms last night. William J. Faucett, president of the club, presided, and addresses were delivered by John Fennel, John A. Hanneberry, William B. Davis and unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That all Sunday laws and ordinances should be reduced to a fair restriction as to church hours and for public quiet, and that it is not in the province of the city Pclice Department to employ detectives and spies against presumed secret Sunday offences; and, be it further Resolved, That the standpoint of the candidate for Mayor of Greater New-York on the foregoing question should be stated in plain and unequivocal language; and, be it further Resolved, That an early convention of the County Committee should be held, and that the County Committee should be advised to promote the cooperation of all kindred organizations agreeing with these resolutions.

failing to do so, committed suicide. The man attacked his wife with a carving-knife. He did not hurt her seriously, but she grasped the knife with her hands and in doing so cut herself. Krause then rushed out of the house, and when a few yards away cut his throat. He died in about ten minutes.

Dr. Victor A. Robertson, of No. 777 Union-st dressed the woman's wounds, and did not consider in necessary to zend her to the hospital. Dr. Robertso had known Krause for some time, and said he wa a steady, hard-working man. He thinks temporar insanity must have been responsible for the act Others say jealousy was the cause of the trouble.

**REPUBLICAN LEAGUE CONVENTION.**

Preparations are being made in this State to send a large delegation from the New-York State League of Republican Clubs to the National convention, to be held at Detroit, July 13, 14 and 15. It is said that over a thousand men will go. President McKinley may go on from Washington and deliver an address.

The entertainment arrangements are in charge of Secretary Russell A. Alger, and all those who go are assured of a good time. The Eric Railroad will carry delegates and their friends from this city at one and one-third fare, which will be $185 for the round trip. Many delegates will take their wives along. It is probable that a special train will be made up of the delegates and their friends from the Greater New-York and Westchester, stopping at Ningara Falls to give all a chance to see the falls. President Colvin is trying to make the representation a large one.
